Course is very challenging. One of the harder econ electives I've taken. However, the topic of healthcare is nevertheless interesting . Course may seem harder because we have it for 3 hours at a time this quarter and so it is hard to stay focused for all 3 hours.

I loved it and the professor. A brilliant man but also a kind heart. Has probably impacted my career.

The instructor is very responsible and the lectures are inspiring too. This is an overall great course.

Tests were fair of the material.

It is an interesting course if you are interested in learning about the economics of how the health sector operates it provides useful insight into a subject that you wouldn't know much about unless you were specifically involved in that field.

I really like this course. It prepares people who want to study health economics or want to go to the health sector. I think adding a bit math, though making it more challenge, will be more useful or practical in the real world.

professor is good at conveying his thinking to us and helps a lot

I absolutely loved this course. I found it so interesting and actually useful for real life. I felt like this was something that many people should take because it relates to what is actually going on in our health care system today. I know that going into this course, I didn't know much about how Medicare and Medicaid worked and insurance among other things. Being that I will be finishing this quarter and having to get my own insurance most likely with a company, this class taught me a lot about how that process worked. Absolutely loved this class and this professor was wonderful.

The course was extremely interesting. I learned a lot about the health sector which I hadn't known before, and looking at it through the lens of an economist was very helpful. I enjoyed this course and I would strongly recommend others to take it.

Clemens is a great professor. I have no further comments on the course material.

The course has some very interesting and eye opening material that makes it a great course to take

Similar to what is covered in class.

Completely fair.

Exams reflect course material and past exams. Very fair.

Exams reflect the course material. High average makes the course a bit challenging.

Exams were very fair. They were super reflective of the material and the practice problems we were assigned.

chill

The exams help me learn more deeply.

The exams are very straightforward. If you study the material then you should do very well on the exams

Fair.

exams are kinda hard i am personally expecting more multiple choices questions

Exams are fair and representative of practice problems.

The exams are very similar to the problem sets and practice exams.
